

A map of Whitehall, Virginia, showing various transportation routes. A thick purple line highlights a path starting from the top left, moving east, then south, then east again, and finally north. A thick orange line highlights a path starting from the bottom left, moving east. A thick black and white dashed line highlights a path starting from the bottom left, moving east, then north, then east, and finally north. A thick red line highlights a path starting from the top left, moving east, then south, then east, and finally north. Three black dots are placed on the purple line at its start, at a junction with the red line, and at its end. The word "Whitehall" is written in a large, bold, black serif font in the center of the map. The background shows a grid of streets, a river, and various colored areas representing different types of land or infrastructure.
